HOME RACES TO BE ON HIGHEST LEVEL

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Some surprise has been expressed that I am adding the sum of $10,000 to the Tanforan Futurity. I am doing it for the simple reason that if racing in California is not of such proportions three years hence that it can afford to hang up worthwhile purses all effort to put the sport on the high plane it should be might as well be dropped. I, for one, am confident racing in this territory is going right on to great accomplishments and I am doing everything possible to see there is no slipup.

The response to the announcement of the Futurity, to be run for the first time in 1938, has been more than gratifying. From all parts of the country have come commendatory letters. It is not overdoing it, probably, to let my readers in on what breeders of the blood horse are saying about the establishment of the one mile race for two year olds.

C. E. Cooper, of Rancho San Luis Rey, warmed the cockles of my heart by writing:

"This announcement of yours will have as much to do with the building up of breeding in the state as any other one thing."

If I can succeed in the way Mr. Cooper suggests I will feel rewarded for all the labor put forward in the last decade and longer. I started Heather Farm and acquired the best breeding stock available at a time when there was no racing in California and just about all of the nurseries of other years had disappeared. It was an up-hill task to bring back both racing and breeding. The establishment of the Tanforan Futurity is but one move to make thoroughbred operations out this way as important as any in the East.

Some people are skeptical as to the West producing youngsters of a class able to meet the "invaders" from Kentucky and other states, but I have no misgivings on that score. California has turned out runners in the past good enough to win anywhere and I have not the least doubt will do it again. Bring on your colts and fillies, we'll give them stiff competition; sometimes you'll win and sometimes the honors will be with us. That's sport.

WATCH YOUR STEP STOP-GO SIGNALS WORKING AGAIN

The street safety signals on Mission at Hillcrest were again put in operation on Monday morning of this week.

This proves a great aid to traffic, both vehicles and pedestrian. The signals have been out of commission for several months owing to the work being carried on during the widening of Mission street and laying of new car tracks.

As our people again become accustomed to the stop and go method at this intersection they will find it a great convenience. In the meantime, "Watch Your Step!"

ELECTORS FAIL TO GIVE APPROVAL AT SPECIAL ELECTION

Improvement Setup Beaten By Vote Of More Than Two To One

Last Saturday's election proved to be a landslide for the adherents of the opposition to the proposed measure.

The proposition as submitted called for an approximate increase of 55 per cent in city taxes for the coming year.

It was proposed to use this additional money, along with a PWA grant from the federal government, to make certain civic improvements throughout the city. A bond issue was at first suggested, but this plan was later changed to the direct taxation proposition for one year instead of extending payments for bonds over a period of time.

A number of the projects found considerable favor with the citizens, while others developed bitter opposition. Because of failure to segregate the projects in order to get expression of opinion on each one individually, the entire setup was overwhelmingly defeated at the polls.

The total vote cast showed 932 ballots against the proposition and only 465 in favor thereof. The measure failed in all the precincts.

The tabulated vote follows:

HOME TEAM LOSES BY CLOSE SCORE IN TOURNAMENT GAME

At the Oakland Pacific Coast League ball park, Wednesday evening of this week, the Daly City Tanforan team lost its first tournament game. The winners were Martins East Side Club and the final score was 5 to 3.

The game ended at the close of the eighth inning, as, under the rules, no inning was allowed to start after 9 o'clock, except in case of a tie.

The local club played a good game, but not good enough to win. The date of the next tournament game of our boys has not yet been announced.

However, we are still in the contest. Hope we win next time.

ENROLLMENT GREATER THAN WAS ANTICIPATED AT JEFFERSON HIGH

Fall Term Opens With Classes All In Readiness For Successful Session

The fall term at Jefferson Union High School began on last Monday morning with a total enrollment of 517 pupils. This is far beyond the enrollment for the entire month at the beginning of last year.

Of these pupils 115 were freshmen who entered as graduates of the grammar schools of the Jefferson Union High School District.

In all of the departments the enrollment was greater than expected, particularly in science and modern languages. Additional classes were found necessary in Biology, Spanish, and German.

Due to the preparations made during summer vacation, the program of each freshman was complete on the opening of school, so that no time was lost in getting down to actual work. In many of the classes assignments were made on Monday for work to be handed in on the second day of school. In the upper classes there was an unusual interest shown.

At the assembly on Tuesday, Principal James Ferguson complimented the student body for its promptness in getting down to work, and for the fine spirit of co-operation shown by the students in discipline and in the organization of the school.

At the first assembly Mr. Ferguson introduced three new teachers: Mr. C. Disbrow, who will teach science and mathematics and coach football; M. D. Vollbrecht, teacher of English and German, and Mr. D. Green, teacher of English. Mr. Green takes the place of Miss Torello, who was married during the summer, and resigned from the High School faculty.

Already the boys are out in force doing their preliminary work in training for the football season. Coach Disbrow is pleased with the spirit shown by the Jefferson boys and by the enthusiasm which they put into their preliminary practice.

The new tennis courts are completed and Jefferson can boast of its field equipment in athletics as among the best to be found anywhere. With a gymnasium and the facilities it would afford not only to high school students, but to the grammar schools and to the adults of the community, Jefferson Union High School District would be able to offer attractions to newcomers not excelled any where.

UNCLE SAM LEADS IN REVIVING PROSPERITY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Elasticity in currency is desirable at all times. To bring about that condition the present national administration has a two-fold program that is working out admirably. A modern system of credit is taking the place of the antiquated one that should have been shelved long ago and, equally important along with what has been done already for gold and silver, loans are being made to individuals and corporations to carry on their mining operations.

Before going any further along this line I would like to digress a bit about the railroad situation, which is also rapidly being brought out of the confusion of the last few years. A man who knows raliroads from A to Z, a son of one of the pioneers in rail transportation, recently said that with the aid of federal government the railroads have been able to build new, fast, streamlined trains with remarkable results.

In a caustic vein the expert pointed out that after seventy years representatives of American enterprise and of the efficiency of private capitalistic management have discovered there are ways of improving the historic day-coach, which they had continued to build in one pattern as if ingenuity in this field had been utterly exhausted.

About the new banking law. For a long time the financial center of the world was in London, later in New York and now, that President Roosevelt has been occupied with such a vital matter as credit and the banking that goes with it, the center is in Washington. I see no reason to complain about that, either.

The new law does not go as far as the administration desired, but it is unqualifiedly in the right direction. As has been said by close students of the legislation, federal government control over the Federal Reserve System and over the banking system of the country in general has been greatly enhanced by the "omnibus" banking statute, as it has been termed.

One of the authors of the highly progressive measure, representative Henry B. Steagall, chairman of the House Banking Committee, declares the Federal Reserve System will be made over to bring it fully into harmony with the advanced policies of the Roosevelt administration. That's just what we wanted and wanted badly.

Governor Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board sees great possiblities in the wiping out of the present Federal Reserve Board and the appointment of a new board by the chief executive of the nation. One of the changes is the elimination of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency from the board. Liberalizing of real estate loans is expected to be a prime factor in the resortation of good times; eligibility of paper for discount is likewise liberalized.

An outstanding feature of the law is the emphasis on the government's plan to control the open market operations of the Federal Reserve System. Another provision that represents a long step forward is that providing that Federal Reserve banks may make advances to member banks on any satisfactory security. This will do away with the inelastic and restricted basis upon which accommodations have been available to member banks in the past.

It is altogether true that such elasticity before the recent crisis would have undoubtedly prevented many of the bank failures and resulting suffering and distress of late years.

DAILY PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR STATE FAIR

World's Largest Revolving Stage To Show "The Conquest of California"

California's epochal progress during the past year in all branches of industry, agricultural and education will be celebrated in ten ever-changing days and nights of festivities beginning next Saturday, when the eighty-first annual California State Fair throws open its gates.

True to its tradition of being ready on time, the fair will start every one of its great divisions into full activity the moment Governor Frank F. Merriam turns the great golden key with which the state's head has annually opened the exposition for years past.

Overflow exhibits, record entries for the great afternoon racing program and night horse show classic, the biggest dairy cattle and swine show in the past ten years and similar evidence of a greatly expanded interest in the fair have made the fair staff organize to handle what is expected to be a new record crowd of nearly 500,000 visitors.

In addition to the harness and running races with their parimutuel betting, which will run each day except on Sundays, daily polo games and the night horse show classic, a new major attraction has been added this year in the brilliant musical and dramatic extravaganza "The Conquest of California."

Using the world's largest revolving stage, a cast of nearly one hundred performers will each night present

SHIRLEY TEMPLE IN NEW ROLE AT LOCAL THEATER

They're calling "Our Little Girl," Shirley Temple's greatest hit. This Fox Film picture, coming to the Daly City Theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, September 1, 2 and 3, has been lauded everywhere.

In this production, the first since the child screen wonder received the special award from the Academp of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, she gives a powerful portrayal of a child's heartbreak.

When those she loves grope in the shadows of misunderstanding, Shirley meets the crisis with a brave smile. She plays at being happy to rebuild a shattered dream.

Alone Shirley Temple suffices to make any picture popular. But Producer Edward Butcher has loaded "Our Little Girl" with talent. Rosemary Ames plays Shirley's mother; Joel Mccrea, who needs no introduction, plays her father.

"Poodles" Hanneford world-famous clown and circus rider has an amazing act; he clowns, rides, falls, and thrills in the circus sequence which has everything complete from the wild animals to the big three-ring tent.

Lyle Talbot, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Jack Donohue, continue the list of fine supporting cast. The direction is by John Robertson.

When Irvin S. Cobb presented Shirley with the Academy Award, he said: "You have made more people happy and made children laugh than any child your age in the history of the world!"

WOMEN'S REALM STRESSED AT SAN DIEGO EXHIBIT

Secrets Of Beauty Made Plain And Educational Side Also Shown

From the far corners of the earth have been gathered the gems of artists' brushes, the rarest of the weavers' bolts, and the newest beauticians' ideas to make the California Pacific International Exposition a veritable women's paradise.

Women play a large part in this giant $20,000,000 world's fair. Daily programs of interest to women visitors are staged throughout the grounds, and hundreds of exhibits were created particularly for them.

Feminine interest at the big show centers in the famous House of Charm, just off the Plaza del Pacifico. Here are assembled the secrets of Hollywood makeup artists, many revealed for the first time. Organizations such as the House of Westmore and the internationally known Max Factor, disclose some closely guarded secrets of Hollywood's most famous boudoirs. In its huge area feminine visitors will find exhibits in the House of Charm that appeal to their love of beauty and style—an extensive showing of apparel, novelties, beauty aids and arnaments.

Another magnet for women exposition visitors is the elaborate Palace of Education. In designing this building the architect has leaned more to the Pueblo Indian type and produced a remarkable example of architecture built by those Indians under supervision of the early Franciscan fathers.

The Palace of Education houses many large and small auditoriums, exhibit halls, and smaller rooms, all built around a central large hall which is dedicated to the fundamental tendencies of the progress of education.

A large central pool and fountain and a mural across the west wall are features designed to bring forth certain general aspects of education.

In this building the part which womankind has played in the tremendous advancement of the West during the past 400 years is brought to the fore through use of animated and still exhibits, charts and displays.

However, women visitors find many other features aimed particularly to interest them in this $20,000,000 exposition.

All around her—in beautiful Balboa Park—is beauty. This park, world famous for its splendor of tropical and semi-tropical growth, is a paradise of beauty for the fair.

In it is a series of gardens, two of which are outstanding—one, a reproduction of the famed formal affair, the Casa del Rey Moro, at Ronda, Spain, and the other a replica of the Alcazar Gardens, the public gardens, of Seville, Spain. The Botanical Gardens, too, amaze visitors.

In the Palace of Fine Arts there is one of the choicest selections of old masters and moderns in America. Particular stress is laid on the works of Southwestern artists during the exposition.

Such outstanding and world-renowned works as Rubens' "Holy Family," and a Gobelin tapestry, once owned by Louis XIV, of France, is there along with works of El Greco, Cranach, Murillo, Zubarron, and many others.

From the Palace of Fine Arts it is but a few steps to the exquisite Franciscan chapel, named in honor of San Diego de Alcala, the name saint of the exposition city. The beautiful altar and reredos form the crowning glory of this tiny chapel.

All in all—the woman visitor to America's Exposition finds much to interest and delight her in the more than 100 exhibit palaces, the amusement zone, the beautiful gardens, and the park, generally—all of which go to make up this colorful pageant which closes November 11.

TANFORAN HORSES BEGIN TO ARRIVE

Large Number Of Runners Will Occupy Stables Early At This Meeting

J. W. Marchbank, directing owner of Tanforan, has announced the track will be thrown open for training purposes next Tuesday. Several hundred toroughbreds will move into the stalls immediately on the opening of the gates. Later on a number of important shipments will join the early comers.

The meeting at the home course starts Saturday, October 5, and will be for a period of twenty-six week days. In accordance with the custom inaugurated last year, Monday will be the off day. One other day, to be announced later, will be omitted from the racing schedule in order to bring the wind-up of the twenty-six days on Armistice Day, Monday, Novemebr 11.

"Things look promising for a highly successful meeting," said Director Marchbank. "We hope for quite a bit of 'class' among the horses that will be shipped from every section of the country. Tanforan has an enviable reputation for sportsmanship and we intend to maintain that record."

Features for the best gallopers in training will be offered in the midweek programs and on each Saturday will be a stakes, beginning with the renewal of the A. B. Spreckels Handicap at six furlongs on the first day. The Lassie Stakes, will be run on Discovery Day, Saturday, October 12, for the first time and will be a feature at each fall meeting thereafter. The race, with the substantial amount of $5000 added, is expected to decide the championship among the fillies.

CELEBRATE AT JOINT OUTING FOR COAST HIGHWAY

Citizens Of Three Counties Hold Outdoor Program Over Letting Contract

More than 500 persons attended the outing on the ranch of Phillip R. Travers, near Pescadero, Sunday in celebration of the letting of bids for the first link of the new Ocean Shore boulevard at Thornton station in the north end of the county. In addition to city and county officials, several state officials participated in the program.

Supervisor Al Witt, Daly City, spoke on behalf of San Mateo County, and told of the great need of the highway, which eventually will connect the three counties with a fine road along the Pacific. Witt said that upon completion of this highway hinged the future of the coastside of San Mateo county. Without it, he pointed out, there could be little development of the county's coast and beach playground.

The First Township member told how the supervisors were appropriating money from year to year for beach development as a recreational center for the county and as a step in the development program of the coast. He said the coast highway would end an isolation that has retarded coastside betterment for many years.

Supervisor Manuel Francis of Half Moon Bay endorsed Witt's sentiments and said the highway would mean a new birth for the coast, which he has represented on the supervisorial board for many years. Colonel John H. Skeggs, district engineer for the state highway department, was one of the principal speakers. Other state officials and prominent Santa Cruz and San Francisco leaders spoke on the necessity of the highway.

Superior Judges Maxwell McNutt and A. R. Cotton were called upon for talks, and they too stressed the importance of the highway to the coast.

NEW PAVILION AT HOSPITAL SAID GREATLY NEEDED

Health Director Points Out Patients Require Better Housing Facilities

Dr. Charles C. Gans, health director, said the present tubercular ward at the hospital is a firetrap. He said facilities are now provided for about 50 to 60 patients, but that a wing with beds for 150 should be constructed for the future. The tubercular hospital will cost $150,000 with $82,000 expected to come from the county bonds and $68,000 from PWA funds.

J. R. Eubanks, speaking to the board on behalf of the relief home. said 24 extra beds were placed in the institution's basement last year, with all but two used.

The courthouse project calls for $100,000 of bonds and $81,000 of federal money. No date has been proposed as yet for te election.

HANDS OF COUNTY TIED IN GARBAGE FIGHT BY COURT

District Attorney of Opinion Old Restraining Order Still Holds Good

District Attorney Ferrell has expressed the opinion that he believed a restraining order issued out of a Santa Clara county court two years ago, prohibiting San Mateo County officials from interfering with the San Francisco garbage dumping in this county, is still in effect. In view of this, Ferrell said, county officials can do nothing officially to inerfere with any new contract.

As a result the sanitary board must take its own action either by placing armed guards at the dump or by litigation.

While this situation was confronting the district, the San Francisco supervisors this week granted the Sanitary Fill Company a ten-year franchise to dispose of city garbage by fill and cover at Bayshore.

Frank V. Kington, attorney for the sanitary board, said today he had informed directors of the district that they may call an election to determine public sentiment on garbage dumping to guide them in forming their policy.

Philip Cain, chairman of the board, said a special meeting probably would be held soon to discuss the new development.

We have told you often that our rates are among the lowest in the country.

Don't take our word for it.

The Federal Power Commission ranks us as being only 19th from lowest in the United States for 40 kwh of domestic use.

The national average rate for a kilowatt hour of electricity for domestic use is 5.3 cents. The P. G. & E. average is 4.4.

The national average for farm power is 2.8 cents per kwh. Our average was 1.8 cents in 1934.

"Kilowatt" is a mysterious term to many. It's a unit of power, equaling one and one-third horsepower or the power of ten men.

A kilowatt hour isn't a time hour. It's the time consumed in using a kilowatt of electric energy.

ONE KILOWATT HOUR EQUALS { A horse and a pony working together for one hour or One man working for 10 hours.

REMEMBER the first vacuum cleaner you ever used? Right then you put kilowatts to work. (Think of them either as horsepower or manpower.) Right then you decided your days of sweeping with a broom were over for all time. Electricity is, no doubt, doing the hard work of many other jobs in your home, because it does them easily and well for little money. Even a few pennies (that's little money, to be sure) will do a lot of scrubbing, beating, rubbing and churning when it hires electric servants.

4.4c for electricity will scrub 4 tubsfull of clothes, and in addition will beat batter for 2 dozen cakes, sweep 6 room-size rugs, and turn a sewing machine for an afternoon of dressmaking . . . Honestly, doesn't electricity work cheaply?

Even in the Orient, where labor is the cheapest, you can't hire a household servant to work ten hours for several times 4 cents.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack, he starts his journey. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own. Barry drops her unfriendliness and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason.

Crack's light-blue eyes sought Hal's—hopeful, it might have seemed, of some sign of pleasure, though not counting on it. Hal wondered again why, under their lazy hopefulness, the eyes should seem to know something that gave them faintly mischievous amusement, seemed also to weigh the possibility of Hal's knowing what it was. "Hi there," said Hal, nodding: there was always something stopped his being quite civil to this quiet, narrow little fella.

"Happened to see you come down here," Crack said, addressing himself to Hal without hurry, "and thought y'wouldn't care if I came." He paused, as if on the chance Hal would say it was all right. Then he turned to Kerrigan, less amiably. "After you're through this round, I'll buy one."

"Nice of you," said Kerrigan, "but we got this bottle between us. Welcome to help yourself."

"Oh," said Crack. "Well, thanks. Maybe just a little one."

And here it was spoiled between Hal and Kerrigan; Hal's rising heart turned dully toward bottom again, toward the fretful confusions that hedged and tripped and badgered his longing for Barry and the wonder of her straight, golden loveliness. He could have escaped through Kerrigan for the time: but now there was only the bourbon, and he knew beforehand it wouldn't be any good to him.

They went back, with a pretense of relish, to items in the day's journey. Crack sat unobtrusively enough, sipping his drink as if it were some not unpalatable medicine, half attentive to what was said, half concerned with his own drowsy speculations. Under his gentle fingers the golf ball moved round a ring of wet on the table. He looked from one to other of them as they talked, except when Hal said something especially enthusiastic; then Crack would watch him through part of Kerrigan's next speech, as if wondering what had made Hal say that, or as if too indolent to turn his head away when he would be turning it back again in a moment. Then in a pause, without stirring himself, he said to Hal, "I bet you know Broadway pretty well—livin' in N'York."

"There's a couple of other things to do in New York, you know," said Hal, looking at him briefly.

The inviting smile stayed on Crack's fair-skinned face and in his youthfully knowing eyes; the golf-ball was motionless under his finger.

"But if you want good-lookin' babes and a good time, Broadway's a pretty good place to get 'em," he said.

"I've heard it was," said Hal, and felt a hypocrite.

Kerrigan drew breath to speak, but Crack—watching Hal—ignored him, saying, "Did you ever go to a place called the Wrong Door?"

"No," said Hal dully; and made himself add, "What's that?"

"Well, it's sort of a—"

"A joint, on West Fifty-third street," Kerrigan interrupted, with a short nod. "You a friend of Jed Silver's?"

Crack's smile was modest, his eyes uncertain, as if he'd been paid a compliment he didn't deserve. He barely glanced at Kerrigan, at his golf-ball, then shyly at Hal as he said: "Well, I sorta know Jed. He's sorta nice to me sometimes, when I'm in N'York."

"See him this last trip?" Kerrigan asked in perfunctory interest.

That pleased Crack sufficiently so that he turned his indolent smile to Kerrigan. "Yeah," he said. "Was up there—talkin' with him an' all coupla nights before we started." He turned back to Hal. "He's got a—"

Without triumph Kerrigan interrupted him again: "Guess you didn't know they raided his place in June, stripped the fixtures out, and put Silver on ice to wait for his rap—and not only for dry-law violation either."

Crack flushed, and a sharp restiveness stood caged in the drowsy blue of his eyes. "No," he said quickly, down at his golf-ball, "I didn't know it."

"Must have been a grand guy to get himself jailed in New York," Hal said to Kerrigan.

"Just a big crime-baby," said Kerrigan in quiet pre-occupation.

Crack's quiet persistence—insinuated even when he was silent—recognized no finality at the table. In a moment, "Say," he said to Hal, "it'd be fun to lay over more'n one night in some of these towns—to get acquainted. Comin' up the road tonight, it looked like there was talent here."

"Guess you could find any amount of it here or anywhere else," said Hal tastelessly, "if you felt like it."

Crack's immature, faintly smiling lips were undecided between embarrassment and assurance. He had the air of making remarks not so much for the direct reply as for the indirect reaction. "You—" he said insecurely, hopefully, "it don't seem like you felt like it very much."

Hal gave him an honest, impersonal look and said flatly, "I don't." Even as he turned to Kerrigan, he knew Crack's speculation was still lazily upon him. But then Kerrigan's expression was different: he was watching Crack with a severe vigilance that seemed outright inimical. Hal looked back quickly, to see what it was; the uncertain smile hadn't altered much: there was only reticent mischief in it again for his saying, "I guess maybe you got other things on your mind."

Hal barely heard the remark. "Nothing on my mind," he said, "except to make five hundred miles tomorrow." He glanced at his watch. "Late, Colonel," he added to Kerrigan. Kerrigan was still watching Crack as if he'd seen him tuck an ace up his sleeve.

"You don't think maybe—" Crack began with diffident care: "you don't think maybe you'd feel different if they wasn't somebody that's—"

"Button it up, slipstream," said Kerrigan.

"What?" said Crack, startled.

"I know what you're going to say," said Kerrigan quietly; "you button it."

Crack closed his fist loosely round the golf-ball, flushed again, swallowed

slowly, and blinked once or twice as if his eyes stung. "I wasn't talking to you," he said, his voice cracking once, warmed out of shiftlessness. "You might's well keep out of my business."

"If it was your business," said Kerrigan, his voice firm and too quiet, "I'd keep out of it surely . . . Plug your exhaust, splash, hear?"

Moisture appeared round the new intensity of Crack's eyes, and blushing besieged the roots of his straight, mouse-colored hair. The unmobile face seemed to want to grimace but not to know how.

"Keep out of," he suddenly recited on a warning rise of tone. "Keep out of my business, you dang —— old drunk."

Hal, starting to his feet, had one astonished glimpse of Kerrigan's face—older, less ruddy, gravely compliant, essentially inattentive to Crack's venom. Hal's chair bouncing over backward made Crack whip round and rise all in one startled motion, as if he had forgotten Hal was there. He was stumbling away sidewise before he'd well caught his balance, his golf-ball on the jump over the floor, as Hal went for him. Then the feel of his throat was between Hal's thumbs, fingers overlapped at the back, and it was the best thing he ever remembered having in his hands. His teeth tried to push one another back into their aching roots for that moment of fine squeezing. Somebody careened hard against him from the side and an arm, like the loop of a jerked hawser at his midriff, swung him away, ripping off his hold. The dark, certain young man from behind the bar stood close beside him, watching him pant through his open mouth as if he'd had fifteen minutes' hard wrestling.

"Listen, friend," said the young bartender, quiet, unsolicitous, unresentful; "kill him outside, will you?"

Hal, looking at him, grew steady at once, without surrendering a single good fragment of his hate. The young man's hand was spread on Hal's moving chest.

"Colonel," said Hal in smoldering steadiness, "if it'll do your experience-museum any good to watch me, I'll be glad to kill him."

"Brother, listen," the young man went on surely, "we got a little business here, see? And it won't help it none to have bodies on the premises. I want you to kill him all right, if you wanta; but some place else, friend, hey? Some place else."

"All right," said Hal. "Let me talk to him."

The bartender's hand came down, and Hal walked toward Crack.

"You'll apologize," he said.

He heard Kerrigan breathing beside him; he was sorry to make him stand listening to this.

Crack's close-set eyes were frightened not by what Hal might do to him but by the relization of what he himself had done. He nodded his head quickly several times, saying: "I—I'll apologize. I'll apologize."

"You'll kneel on the floor to do it," said Hal. Crack glanced at the floor as if to see whether there was something especially vile he had to kneel in, but his eyes came quickly back to Hal's, for fear of missing something.

Hal waited. Crack knelt awkwardly, watching Hal for some sign of an extra way to please him. Then he turned his reluctant look to Kerrigan.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I take it back. I shouldn't have said it. I'll always be sorry I said it. I shouldn't take liquor. It was that. It makes me crazy. I do things I'm sorry for. I— I hope you'll forget it. It was an awful thing to say—terrible." He seemed to be inwardly frightened just thinking about it.

Hal heard Kerrigan say, "Get up."

Then he looked at him, smiling an attempt at unremorseful apology, and said, "Finish our drinks, shall we?" He hoped they could get out of this place, having drunk and paid and said good night leisurely—all before the complete, trembling backwash of fury took him, before Kerrigan or the competent young chap at the bar should see how badly he would tremble.

CHAPTER VI

Saturday

It was a grander breadth into which the Iowa morning lighted them. Hal had pictured how it would be in the car this day: restraint, uneasiness, with periodic attempt to force aside a loaded atmosphere. But, as Rasputin's honest, sturdy speed rushed them westward, it was not at all as Hal had pictured it. A sentence of his father's that muddy morning in New York, drew his rueful smile: "Another thing you need to get over is this cheerful idea that any little world you're in revolves around you." And it was a new sort of pleasure to Hal to close away his prepared moodiness and join himself with the closer companionship in which the morning started.

"Well, here we are again," said Mrs. Pulsipher in a tone of comfortable settling to pleasure. "It seems like we fit together into one big family, don't it?"

John Pulsipher broke off his monotonous humming of the tune that might once, long ago, have been "The Arkansas Traveler." "Say," he said cautiously, leaning a little between Hal and Kerrigan, "where did you fellers go to last night?"

"Down the street—to one of Joe's places," said Kerrigan, as if the memory of it were genial pleasure to him.

"Next time," John submitted, excitement under his caution, "if there's nothin' private you two got to talk over, would you maybe let me—let me—"

"Bet your lodge-emblem," said Kerrigan in quick benevolence; and the implication that he spoke for them both in such a gesture underscored Hal's good sense of their nearer intimacy, tacitly established last night, tacitly acknowledged and savored this morning. That was something Crack had done for him.

There had been no mark on Crack's throat this morning, over the small opening of the lapels; and Hal would forget that he had last night paid the narrow, insinuating little soul the compliment of wanting to strangle it out of the narrow, old-fashioned little body. Crack's apology last night had worn a certain horrified, bewildered sincerity; and if Kerrigan forgave the little mongrel, Hal needn't dignify him by hate.

It didn't matter. All that really mattered was Barry—her blue eyes washed clean of last night's fear, freshly lighted by the loveliness that gave its life to her lovely body. She was there in the car, secure and warm and whole for him to come to. Whatever it was that had held her back, made her throw in his way such an irrelevant obstacle as last night's calling of Sister Anastasia, it couldn't—even if it were to return—stand against a necessity as enveloping, as foreordained as the coming of summer to a wintry year. There was ripened power, even in Hal's discovery that he was no longer curious about the source of her restraints, her fears, her withdrawals. And for another time he had learned not to let himself be baffled by the shadowy children of his perverse fancy.

Even the straight road was quickened under Rasputin's steady wheels, and towns that the map forecast along the red stripe of the route succeeded each other in their brick actuality before they were expected. Between the towns the straight road shimmered in the heat ahead, as if under pale water; the farmsteads of small white house and big red barns accepted the blazing sun in stoic memory of winters past and present.

For Sending Blackmail Letters

The legal penalty for sending blackmail letters through the United States mail is either $5,000 fine or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

Nation Never Forgetful of Debt to Naval Hero

On the Fourth of July France placed a marble memorial to the honor of John Paul Jones, at the spot where in Paris his body rested from the time of his death in 1792 until his forgotten grave was found and the body brought to the United States in 1905, a period of more than a century of neglect by both countries. The French had not marked his grave nor given it honor and we ourselves were content to do him honor only in our school book histories and occasionally listen to some orator declare that he had "only just begun to fight" for something or other. It now rests in the naval cemetery at Annapolis, its monument a constant inspiration to thousands of cadets, who hope some day to place their names beside his on the scroll of national heroes.

John Paul, which was his right name, Jones being added after he came to America to live in Virginia in 1773, had a soul for adventure and daring. He fought under the flags of three nations, not as a mere soldier of fortune, but as an adventurous spirit eager to deliver blows where he thought they should be given. Other men of adventurous impulse had under the British flag fought for plunder, as did the notorious Sir Francis Drake, knighted by Queen Elizabeth for the riches he brought to her from plundered Spanish ports and galleons. Jones took no plunder. He even failed to receive much of the regular naval portion of the prize money from captured ships.

France gave him a converted merchant ship for a flagship and then in surprise acclaimed him for defeating in his Bon Homme Richard, named for Benjamin Franklin, the much superior Serapis and capturing her while his own ship was sinking. She voted him a medal and the king bestowed upon him the sword and cross of the Order of Military Merit. Later he was voted a pension, which was never paid. Russia, for whom he fought valiantly and successfully against the Turks, gave him nothing, so far as history shows.

As for the United States, he was promised command of a new 74-gun ship of the line, but he never set foot on her deck or any other fighting ship of the American navy during the last four years of the war. In 1787, five years before his death, Congress voted him a gold medal, and 118 years later we brought his body to this country for honored rest in the naval cemetery. France was in the throes of the great revolution when Jones died and was obscurely buried in Paris, but the United States was not, nor was there anything during that more than a century of neglect by which it could be justified. John Paul Jones, while the most conspicuous, is not the only great hero in our national life who might be cited as proof that "republics are ungrateful." So are monarchies and empires, as his case makes plain. We were not ungrateful, even though our demonstration of honor was long delayed. We were merely neglectful, which, next to selfishness, is the greatest of mass human failings. Even while we long neglected his body, we took constant inspiration from his words and deeds, and perhaps, were he alive to decide, that would please him most.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

MILL HEADS AND TAILINGS

Comstock Lode Mine Staging Comeback — Let Us Blast Our Way To Prosperity.

Says Sidney Norman in the Vancouver Sun:

They sometimes come back. And that applies these days to some of the great mining camps of the west. The last to perk up, under the stimulant of higher gold and silver prices, is the old Comstock which back in the 60's, poured out fabulous riches to finance the Union in the Civil War, and exacted statehood as its reward.

It was in 1859 that the epochal strike was made, and then ensued one of the greatest stampedes in all history, and the quick rise to fortune of John W. Mackay, James G. Fair, William Sharon, Adolph Sutro, O'Brien, Flood and George Hearst.

Records show that the district produced close to $400 millions up to 1921, and paid over $126 millions in dividends. It galvanized all the west and made a great city of San Francisco by the Golden Gate.

Virginia City became the richest town in the world. To it were drawn the leading actors and actresses of the time and the financially great.

The old opera house still stands and on the register of the crumbling hotel are yet to be seen the scrawls of famous actors.

During the years that passed since those exciting days, old Virginia City became but a ghost of her past. Practically every building on the main street decayed to collapse. Population, once 30,000, dwindled to less than 500.

But a few old-timers held on and now, with fading eyesight, they will witness what may be the start of a revival restoring all the old glories of the greatest gold-silver camp the North American continent has seen.

There have been several false starts in recent years, noticeably the effort of the late Bulkeley Wells, backed by the Whitney millions.

A great milling plant was built, with cyanide tanks big enough to hold a hundred dancers, who were invited to a christening as each was finished, but the ores did not live up to expectted values and the project failed, partly from low values, but partly from trouble between Wells and his backers.

Incidentally, Bulkeley Wells, one of the finest men who ever mined in the West, idol of Colorado society and mining circles for many years, later finished his career at San Francisco in despair.

Used to almost unlimited money all his life, he could not face poverty that gradually closed in upon him following his break with the Whitney interests, and in the depth of the depression a few years ago, he took the shortest cut.

The present revival of the Comstock seems to command the big backing essential to success. No effort, except on a grand scale, can hope to be successful.

Now Ophir, Mexican, Andes and Consolidated Virginia mines, heart of the camp, have been amalgamated into one company, backed, it is said, by the millions of John J. Raskob, "Barney" Baruch and legally fathered by Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, champion of silver and one who knows every prospect hole in the state.

The latest move seems to suggest that men who should be in the know, are convinced that silver prices will remain at or above the present levels.

While the great mines of the district produced gold to the value of $164 millions, the greater value was from silver, which yielded over $222 millions up until 1921. It is interesting to know that up until that date nearly 12½ million tons of ore was handled.

The last time I visited Virginia City was about eight years ago, when I attended a meeting of Goldfield oldtimers at Reno.

In company with Zeb Kendall, one of the celebrities of the Sagebrush State—tall, gaunt and mine wise—I ran down to the old town for a brief stay and prowled through the old theater and hotel, saw the Wells-Fargo office that handled the camp's wealth and conjured up scenes of the long ago.

The great cyanide plant at Bulkeley Wells was then being built and the camp had taken on a better aspect, although it was still far from prosperous in a general way.

Zeb Kendall then held the Mexican mine on some kind of bond or option and had been carrying out a plan somewhat unique in mining practice, at least so far as my experience went.

He claimed lots of ore that would run from $6 to $7 per ton in gold and silver, but concluded that the expense of lifting it to surface would preclude profit under the then-prevailing prices of the metals.

So, he conceived the idea of placing a milling plant underground (I think it was at the 800-foot level) and dropping his ore straight from the stopes through a chute into the mill.

Below were cavernous stopes which he intended to use as a dump for tailings and still below that was the Sutro tunnel, which cut the Comstock lode at a vertical depth of 1,00 feet and was completed in the 70's.

At the time of my visit the station for the mill had been excavated and Zeb was then worrying about what to use for money in exchange for the necessary machinery. He asked me if I thought I could raise capital in Toronto, for which city I was bound, but I could give him no hope in that direction.

Financing of the venture was a difficult matter, especially in the early days of the Great Depression. Whether or not the plant was ever finished, or even started, I do not know.

The last time I saw Zeb was a year ago at the San Francisco Mining Exchange on Bush street, of which he has long been a speculating member, and at that time he was Mexicanmum.

Perhaps he figures in the latest deal! I sincerely hope so. He is, to put it colloquially, a "regular guy" and he has had his tough moments in the nearby years. He is a typical Western mining man and promoter, and withal a wonderful companion.

Zeb, old boy, here's hoping!

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"The law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." These words from John comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, September 1, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Christ Jesus." Included among the scriptual selections will be: "When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said, Some say that hou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matt. 16: 13-16.

The following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Yearning to be understood, the Master repeated, 'But whom say ye that I am?' . . . . . With his usual impetuosity, Simon replied for his brethren, and his reply set forth a great fact: 'Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God!' That is: The Messiah is what thou hast declared,—Christ, the spirit of God, of Truth, Life, and Love, which heals mentally" (p. 137).

SEAMEN'S PASTOR TO TELL OF EXPERIENCES

The Presbyterian Church of Daly City will be honored on Sunday morning with the presence of Rev. Oscar Zimmerman, founder and president of the Immanuel Mission to Seamen, which has branches in all the principal ports of the world.

Mr. Zimmerman will tell of some of his amazing experiences among Chinese, Russians, Scandinavians and many others who go down to the sea in ships. The church is located at Hanover and Evergreen. Service will commence at 11 a. m.

GIVEN SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A group of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Lottie Renny of Peoria street, Friday evening of last week, and gave her a surprise party, honoring her on her birthday.

Mrs. Renny was presented with a handsome card table.

A pleasant evening was spent playing cards. At a late hour tasty refreshments were enjoyed by all.

Among those present were Mesdames Eda Torrance, Etta Mehan, Emma Woodard, Helen Grantham, Dolly Roberts, Mazie Boyle, Josephine McHugh, Mae Gorman, Hazel Pomisel, Angela Johnson, Mabel McNally, Bert MacCarthy, Lottie Lupton and Lottie Renny.

STIPERS AND SALMON PLENTY

By "Bill" Grantham)

The past week saw a slight improvement in the striped bass conditions. Napa Slough produced many limits of 3 to 5 pound fish, although the waters still swarm with small bass. Carquinez Straits, three Mile Slough and Rio Vista produced some larger fish, but no great improvement over conditions the week previous. Did you read of the 50 pounder caught off Muir Beach? Wat a fish.

Salmon continue their run in the Klamath and Rogue River sections. Few steelhead taken. How many of you have trolled for salmon off our local coast? The area between Pedro Point and the Gate is alive with salmon. Get your bass outfit, 250 yard reel, 4 or 5 feet of steel leader, 8 to 12 ounce sinker and a Bear Valley, Kewell or Andy Reeker spoon No. 6 or 8, and go to it. Instead of spending $3 or $4 per head for a trip up the sloughs, pool your money and take a lunch outside the Heads.

Have you written the Rio Vista Chamber of Commerce for your reservation of a boat for the Derby, September 8? Do so now, as the time is short.

After long and serious consideration I have accepted the position of fourth mate on the prize boat that one of our members is going to win at this Derby. Good luck, boys!

FRIENDS SURPRISE ON BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Pearl McCanless of Woodrow street was pleasantly surprised Saturday evening by a group of relatives and friends who walked in well laden down with good things to eat, to help Mrs. McCanless celebrate her birthday.

After a pleasant evening of cards refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. F. L. McCanless, Mr. and Mrs. A. Presley, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. Grace Talmadge and children, Betty and Billie, Mrs. F. Hansen, Miss Mildred McCanless and Jack and Bill McCanless.

"WIFE SAVING" WITH APPLIANCES FOR HOUSEHOLD

Changing the character of its electrified farm exhibit in some respects, Pacific Gas & Electric Company is conducting a "Wife Saving Station" at the forthcoming State Fair, at Sacramento, September 1 to 9. The attractive little cottage which has been the center of the company's "Electricity on the Farm" exhibit for several years is to be equipped as never before with those household appliances dear to the heart of every housewife. Demonstrations will be made daily of "wife saving" — the saving of the women who must make the home from unnecessary steps and from back-breaking drudgery.

The features dealing essentially with farm uses of electricity will not be neglected, however. The latest in pumps for irrigation, in dairy and poultry house equipment, in hot beds for superior plant production, and in small motors for farm power service will be shown as usual.

The "Wife Saving Station" will be an exhibit entirely separate from the company's exhibit of "The Copper Trail," in the Appliance and Food Show building.

WHAT IS EXPECTED SEPTEMBER MONTH

"The morrow was a bright September morn;
The earth was beautiful as if newborn;
There was that nameless splendor everywhere,
That wild exhilaration in the air,
Which makes the passers in the city street
Congratulate each other when they meet."—Longfellow.

Not only is this month the transition period between summer and winter, but it is also the harvest period for many of the crops. In the calendar of Charlemagne, September was called the "harvest month," and it still bears that name in Switzerland. In certain localities near the ocean there is much fog at this time of the year, when there is considerable difference in temperature during various hours of the day.

When a cloud forms, at so low a level that it rests on the ground or on the surface of the sea, it is known as fog; but, when it presents only a faint cloudiness, it is called mist. Fogs often appear at sea when the cold winds from icebergs blow across a warm region, where the atmosphere is filled with moisture. A warm wind blowing into a cold atmosphere will form fog, and many of the fog banks and cloud banks so common off the coast of Newfoundland are formed in this way. No fog will appear until the cold air has absorbed as much vapor as it can hold. It sometimes forms suddenly. The hot steam arising from a kettle shows how rapidly the moisture in warm air is condensed when it reaches much cooler air. The disagreeable odor of heavy fog in large cities is due to smoke and the many impure gases which it collects.

In time of fog, signals are used. By means of sound, warnings are issued to vessels at sea. Many devices are used such as horns, whistles, bells and guns. By means of these devices agreed upon at the International Marine Conference held at Washington in 1890, vessels that are completely hidden from sight in the fog may enable other vessels to locate their positions and avoid the risk of collision.

Lighthouses are equipped with fog signals for use when the light is obscured. The most powerful fog signal is a large steam siren. Fog signals generally used on railways consist of bombs or torpedoes attached to the rails and exploded by the enine as it passes over them.

September is one of four months of the year that has thirty days.

"Thirty days hath September
April, June and November."

WEEKLY BULLETIN

FIRE PREVENTION

By Chief A. P. Chesney

You may never have had a fire. No! But tomorrow you may have one that will wipe out your home or a business you have built up by long years of hard toil. Fire follows no schedule; it strikes blindly. Is there any reason why it cannot strike you? Now, before it is too late, grasp the opportunity to safeguard your home and business against fire's whims. Play safe, be careful this will pay you.

Too long have the fire departments labored alone and without support of the citizens in this endeavor to reduce the appalling fire loss that has become so large throughout the nation.

Now is the time for the private citizen to awake to his responsibility in the matter and give his support to this cause.

Uncommon Sense By John Blake

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

When I was a youngster in a little town I rarely saw men play in the day time.

Outdoors

True, the well-to-do men of the village owned horses and carriages, but if one of them had been seen driving such a rig around town on a week day, people either would have thought he had suddenly come into a fortune or else that he had gone crazy.

Most of these men knew little about the town they lived in beyond the streets that took them to and from their stores or offices.

Thirty years after I left the town I went back to look it over.

I found that most of the fairly prosperous men of the town had motor cars, and used them.

They would knock off work Saturday afternoon, drive one or two hundred miles to and from some other town, or take their wives and children out for a drive around the near-by countryside.

They did not neglect their business, but they had learned how to use their idle time, and that was a fine thing.

More and more the people of this country are learning to do that.

In England, Germany, France and Italy—I have not visited any other European countries—I saw crowds of people whose day's work was done, sitting around in cafes and sipping light wine or beer, talking and getting real fun out of life.

There was none of the rush and the hurry that you see in many of the cities in this country.

But we are learning, over here.

Men knock off work over week ends and play golf or take their wives and children out to see what the adjoining country looks like.

They are learning that out doors is a fine place, and that you will not catch your death of cold if you go out in it.

They are learning about their neighbors—and their neighbors now, since the automobile is in use, may dwell 10, 20 or 30 miles away and still be within easy reach.

Today the well-to-do man who used to be contented with going to a big city once in five years, makes trips to many big cities, and makes them three or four times a year—just for fun.

Life was meant to enjoy. For a long time this never occurred to the man of moderate means.

But he has discovered that he feels better and works better and understands life better if he takes it easy now and then, and gets a look beyond the range of the windows of his home.

Gambler's Chance

A little while ago a few persons won considerable sums of money on a horse race on the other side of the ocean.

It is possible, now and then, to get rich without effort.

It is possible to do this about once in 10,000 times.

To me it seems too bad that the newspapers did not have white paper enough and the interest in losers was not general enough so that the names of every man and woman who bought tickets for this lottery could have been printed right after the drawings.

By and by, if you follow the lives of the people who won the big prizes you will find that the money they won has done them no or little good.

Gambling in the market, or on races, or on anything else is a proof that one is either lazy or weak minded.

I can understand why a person who isn't "getting along" can be tempted to take a flier on this or that gambling device.

It is not pleasant to lack money when others around you have it.

It is easy to dream of big winnings, made without effort.

But if everybody indulged in that kind of dreams there would be no work done, no progress, and honest effort would be regarded as rank foolishness.

Bear in mind that for every man or woman who "is in the money" when lottery results are declared, there are thousands of others who get nothing.

"By the sweat of your face shall ye eat bread."

The men who made this country were not gamblers.

Washington, Franklin, Lincoln, Lee, had no desire to get rich quick.

Their chief interest was in doing all they could for their fellow human beings.

There have been gamblers in war—Napoleon for example. But you know what happened to them.

* * *

The happiest man is the man who can look back through the years satisfied that he has made his own way, that he has never thrust any one down to climb to wealth or success over him, that he always has played fair with his fellow human beings.

And after all it is happiness that we all desire.

When age encroaches we like to feel that we have never cheated, that we never have tried to pull anybody down, that we have abided by the rules of life.

That insures a clear conscience, untroubled sleep at night. More than that it earns the esteem and the good will of the people around us.

We cannot all be great or famous. But we can all be honest, uncovetous and willing to work, and to work hard for what we get.

Ordinarily it is much more difficult for the heavier figure to present the same graciously feminine appearance as her slim sister achieves! But not when our stylist sets out to design a thoroughly feminine but neatly tailored afternoon frock! Witness the result. First see how trim the neck and skirt details are. Then, how simply feminine softness is gathered into the yoke. Now note the extremely simple cut of the yoke and cape and the graceful, flattering fall of the cape itself. Colma News Notes

Colma is justly proud of its history-making C. V. F. D. tug of war team. Sunday they traveled to Valente Park in Lafayette to conquer, in just eighteen minutes, the hitherto undefeated team there. The following members of the team are responsible for the beautiful silver trophy they are now displaying: Raymond Malone, John Garibaldi, George Ferretti, Ritchie Bauer, and Joe, Rico, and Dino Agresti.

Colma was well represented at a very unusual barbecue, held at the home of Louis Gregori in Redwood City Sunday evening. It was a deer meat-feed and was deliciously prepared in steak and stew form. Over one hundred guests were present.

Miss Ruth Geen left the first of this week to make her home in Martinez with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Green. She plans to enter school there next Tuesday.

Baden Kennel club will end its 1935 summer meeting, one of the most successful in its history, tomorrow night with the running of the famous Baden Derby, an eight-dog race at seven-sixteenths of a mile, one of the real thrills of the season. PICTURES SHOWS FINANCIAL SETUP OF CALIFORNIA

Films Of Largest Banking Structure In West Show At Columbus Hall

Transamerica Corporation, largest financial institution of te West, will be shown to the public of Colma in all of its service functions of banking, insurance, real estate, and agricultural finance on Wednesday, September 4, at 7:15 and 8 p. m. at Columbus Hall.

The showing is in the form of a complete talking motion picture bringing out in detail all of the means by which Transamerica serves the territory in which its subsidiaries operate.

"The motion picture is particularly significant," said John W. Grant, president, "because it is the first time that a financial institution has employed motion picture and sound equipment as a means of demonstrating its operations and setting forth its aims and purposes to the public.

"The subject of banking is of growing public interest, and we believe that the people of Colma will be interested to learn from our picture how the largest bank in the West performs its services, and of the part that it plays in the development of the state as a whole.

"The picture shows some interesting sidelights on what a financial institution is and does. For example, the motion picture industry of Hollywood is one of the features of the production. The film, 'Transamerica,' however, covers more territory than the field of banking. It is, in fact, a motion picture and sound portrait of the financial pattern of California and the West."

FRANCISCAN CLUB INSTALLS OFFICERS

A group of thirty-six members and guests of the Franciscan Boys Club attended the club's semi annual banquet and dinner dance held in the mezzanine floor of the Lido Cafe, in San Francisco, last Saturday evening.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Cedar Creek Hydraulic Mines Ltd., is again operating its glacial deposit holdings on Cedar Creek, three miles from Likely, about 800 feet vertically above Quesnel Lake, the first shipment for the season being 80 ounces, with another on the way.

Everything points to a most successful season. Last year 871 ounces were recovered and considerable important testing of ground accomplished. This year a much higher recovery is expected, as several high grade patches located last year will be worked.

Several patches carry exceptional values, running as high as 50 cents to $1 a pan, with gold figured at the old price. The yield of the area is nugety, with some pieces running up to as high as $40 and $50.

Sunshine Mining Co., Coeur d'Alene district, Idaho, largest silver producer in the United States, has declared a dividend of 30 cents a share.

Since incorporation in 1920, the company has paid off the original purchase price of $200,000, met all costs of development and mill construction and, with present payment, distributed close to $3,000,000 in dividends.

Last year Sunshine produced 3,372,290 ounces of silver, compared with 3,212,000 ounces for 1933 and 3,015,544 in 1932. Mill capacity is now being largely increased and output this year is expected to smash all previous records.

Joe Dupuis recently arrived in Edmonton after a two-year prospecting trip to the headwaters of the Liard River country with $30,000 worth of placer gold.

Report confirms previous prophesies as to heavy yield that may reasonably be expected from that quarter.

Alexander Fraser, brother of Managing Director Thomas Fraser of Fairview Amalgamated Gold Mines, Fairview Camp, Osoyoos division, has been appointed mine superintendent upon the recommendation of B. W. W. McDougall, M. E., consulting engineer for the company.

* * *

Alfred C. Garde has arrived at the property of Rio Grande Mines, Ltd., Hudson Bay Mountain, near Smithers, Omineca division, to take charge of development, now under way with a crew of eight men, according to announcement by the company.

A carload of new machinery has reached Oliver from the Morning Star (Fairview) Gold Mines mill and is now being transported to the mine.

It includes ball mill, crusher, tanks and miscellaneous equipment. Building is completed, concrete bases set for machinery, and ore bins constructed, so that all that remains to be done is setting up of machinery.

After a search carried on intermittenly for 35 years, ore has been struck in the Mineral Point ground of Coeur d'Alene Mines Corporation, west of Sunshine in the Couer d'Alene district.

The property was located by Bill Osborn, one of the camp's pioneers, who spent many years in fruitless search. What is believed to be the Sunshine vein was recently struck in the No. 3½ tunnel after it had been located by a diamond drill in three different places, at depth of 600 feet from surface.

In early days, shipments to the value of between $150,000 and $200,000 were made, but the vein was then lost by faulting. The deepest tunnel, No. 5, will attain a depth of 1100 feet on the dip of the vein.

The first man to propose that Alaska be colonized by farmers was John Ronan, a former Hyder prospector now working with the Alaska-Juneau Gold Mining Co. He suggested the plan to Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior under President Woodrow Wilson. He urged that Scandinavian farmers be imported to settle on lands adjacent to the Alaska Railroad, and although Lane favored the plan, it was discarded as a result of conditions created by the World War.

Thirty men are at work on the property of Hedley Mascot Gold Mines, Hedley camp, Osoyoos district, and contract for 5000-foot tramway has been let to B. C. Riblet Tramway Co. of Vancouver and Spokane, connecting mine portal and mill.

Contract for 2900-foot crosscut tunnel has also been let, work to start shortly; right of way is being cleared for tramway and road from town to mill site at foot of Climax Bluff is being graded.

SAN FRANCISCO DAY AT EXPO

Preparation Being Made For Many Visitors To Southern Show City

A gigantic celebration is planned for "San Francisco Day" at the San Diego Exposition, September 14. Every service club, fraternal and civic organization in northern California will be asked to co-operate in making the event an outstanding success. Several hundred civic leaders, business men and officials who are now working on plans for the 1938 San Francisco Exposition, will join the San Diego fete.

R. F. Allen, president of the Down Town Association and chairman of the committee in charge, stated that it is vitally important that plans for the San Francisco Bay Bridge Exposition be brought to the attention of San Diego visitors and "San Francisco Day" was the golden opportunity.

Assurance of co-operation in mapping a program for the occasion has come from the Redwood Empire Association and the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. Special Pullman trains will leave San Francisco on Friday night, September 13, and return here early Monday morning, September 16. Boat excursions and auto caravan parties are also being organized.

Tentative plans call for the display of Bay Bridge motion pictures at the San Diego Fair. Also, an exhibit of a model of the 1938 San Francisco Exposition grounds, which is now being built.

SUPERVISORS WANT REPORT ON SERA PROJECTS

Board Members Express Keen Dissatisfaction Over Amount Of Franchise Taxes Paid In Past.

The Board of Supervisors of San Mateo County this week expressed a desire to learn more about the SERA projects within this county, consisting of nineteen San Mateo County unemployment relief projects submitted to WPA headquarters in Washington by San Mateo County.

According to a letter from Lawrence Westbrook, WPA assistant administrator, only three of the twenty-two county projects are being studied by Washington engineers.

These projects are the Terrace creek culvert and Hoover school grounds improvements in Burlingame, and the Colma-Baden creek drainage system.

Westbrook's letter was in reply to a recent telegram from the supervisors and county unemployment relief committee to Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins urging speedy approval of the projects to prevent delay in the relief program.

The board requested County Executive Walter T. Kellogg to secure information about the remaining projects.

Kellogg also was asked to investigate the possibility of securing higher franchise taxes from the Pacific Gas & Electric Company after Supervisor Al Witt of Colma expressed dissatisfaction with a check of $900.32 from the firm. The check was in payment of the annual franchise fee. The supervisors thought the county was entitled to a larger amount.

Construction of roads to a 1600-foot section of beach frontage at Salada Beach, being donated to the county by the Ocean Shore Land company, was authorized. The roads will cost approximately $300.

On recommendation of Supervisor Witt, Ralph H. Mitchell was appointed a member of the Bayshore fire commission.

Budgets for the Millbrae, North Fair Oaks, and Colma sanitary districts, all in excess of expenditure limitations, were referred to Controller Edward Stack. Similar action was taken on the Belmont water district $4500 budget.

Six applications for permits to operate hog ranches near Colma were referred to Maj. Charles Gans, county health director, for investigation. A hearing will be held Monday.

ON WITH THE DANCE LET JOY BE UNCONFINED

It is believed by many that. "Anticipation is better than participation." In many instances, this statement is true, but in looking forward to the Benefit Dance for Officer Edmond L. Heim, the participation will far outweigh the anticipation, in the realization of this event, the getting together of relatives, friends, neighbors, acquaintances and even, perhaps, a few strangers—all sharing the same happiness, the joy we always feel when we have helped along a worthy cause.

A fine big floor for dancing, entrancing music and everything else that goes to make up a good time will be waiting for you at the Tanforan Club House, Saturday evening, September 7, 1935. The time is near at hand. Are you ready?

"If never trials came to us, if grief an' sorrow passed us by,
If every day the sun came out an' clouds were never in the sky,
We'd still have neighbors, I suppose, each one pursuin' selfish ends,
But only neighbors they would be —we'd never know them as our friends."—Edgar A. Guest.
